

If You're Thinking Solar, Think Flogas Too!

Flogas - people with energy, Reaching More Homes

If you're installing Solar Panels there's one really important thing to keep in mind...in Ireland, most Solar Panels only provide around 50% of your home's hot water needs annually, so you'll need a flexible and responsive complimentary source of fuel to cope with the shortfall. Flogas Home Heating is the ideal economical and efficient solution. With Flogas, you're guaranteed clean, efficient central heating, instant hot water, economical cooking, cosy gas fires and gas tumble dryers, whatever the Irish weather is doing!

Solar Heating and Flogas – The Perfect Combination

No matter where you live in Ireland, Flogas can supply everything you need for a cosy home. Flogas supplies and delivers Liquefied Petroleum Gas (LP Gas) to thousands of homes throughout Ireland. Flogas efficiency combined with excellent customer service means that more homeowners are now turning to Flogas Home Heating Solutions.

Solar technology has become ever more popular in recent years, using roof-mounted solar collectors to transform sunlight into heat for domestic use. A typical 5 m² solar panel system can provide about 80% of your hot water heating requirements in summertime and up to 20% in winter. Solar heating should be able to provide around 50% of your home's annual hot water requirements.

With our unpredictable Irish weather, it is impossible to guarantee the maximum amount of sunlight possible, even in summertime. Consequently, these systems need another source to top up the hot water generated from solar panels and to operate your home central heating system.

It is essential that the boiler you choose should be flexible and responsive enough to be able to deal with the hot water shortfall from your solar heating system. Condensing boilers give you maximum flexibility, and condensing gas boilers give the lowest emissions with almost 100% efficiency, compared to a seasonal efficiency of only 70% -75% for standard boilers. That's why it makes perfect sense to choose a Condensing gas boiler!
