Oil Theft – The Challenge

Clonmel resident Eddie Houlihan, pictured overleaf with Flogas area representative Tommy Murray, had heard stories of the rise of oil theft in rural areas. The impact of such a crime didn't hit home until it happened to him.

Eddie said, “We had been away for a few days and when we got back, the house was cold, even though we had left the timer on. We couldn't figure it out until we checked the tank level and discovered the oil was gone.”

The Flogas Solution

Eddie had been considering several home heating options for a while, but the oil theft now made it a priority. As a grant is available from the Sustainability Energy Authority of Ireland (SEAI) to upgrade heating systems, Eddie decided to avail of it to switch from oil to LPG. A colleague recommended Heat Services Networks, a Flogas-approved and RGII registered gas installer and a free site visit was arranged.

“LPG is theft-proof and that was a big plus as far as I was concerned. I also liked the efficiency of gas boilers and their lower running costs. Flogas and Heat Services Network were very prompt and efficient in calling out and providing a quote, as well as an offer of 1200 litres of free gas, so I decided to go with them.” said Eddie.

Seamless Changeover Process

The conversion only took a couple of days, it all went very smoothly and the Houlihan family now use LPG for heating, hot water, gas fire and their gas barbeque.

“I am very happy with everything, and the gas boiler is a lot quieter. The central heating and hot water are instant and it’s a very neat installation too. It’s also a great advantage to have our gas barbeque piped into the system and I am impressed with how versatile LPG is to use in the home.” said Eddie.

Tommy Murray, Flogas area representative said, “We are receiving an increasing level of enquiries from homeowners who are interested in switching to LPG for several reasons, including worries about oil theft. In addition, LPG is the ideal option for those looking to switch to a more modern, efficient heating system that is clean and versatile.”
